jected Mr. Hugh Craft, who is keeper of the county poor farm, "when I was a boy 50 years ago I had phthisis—the same may—only worse. They said I couldn't get well. I guess my folks had tried every thing on earth to cure me, but they said I'd die. One day an old fellow told them a new remedy. They stood me against a post, bored a hole exactly even with the top of my head, shoved some of my hair into it and cut it off. They then drove a peg into the hole, leaving a few strands of hair sticking out. That settled my phthisis! From that day to this I've never had a touch of it. I'm a living testimonial to the efficacy of that remedy."

The farmer's face lightened and he looked hopefully at his boy. He seemed to be in doubt, whether to buy some of the drug store medicine, or to go home and give the new remedy a trial.

"Yes, pardner, let me tell you something more about that," spoke up Mr. Lum Coleman, the well known carpenter. "When I was a country boy I had that thing just like your boy's got it. They didn't stand me up against any post, though. They stood me against the smoke house door facing, bored a hole over the top of my head, and chucked in a lock of my hair by a peg, cutting the peg off even, so no one could come along and pull it out. That cured me entirely, so help me! I felt a touch of it once, sometime afterwards though, but noticed that the hot weather had loosened that peg in the smoke house door, and it was in danger to coming out. I drove her in tight again, and now look at me,—another living example!"

The farmer was fully persuaded. He took by the hand the little boy with the boisterous respiratory organs and gently led him out. He said he guessed he'd "shore go home an' try that new remedy," and as Dr. Lang saw his sale vanished out the front door, he swore vengeance against every "old-fashioned cure" on the category, and threatened to bar all men over thirty years of age from the stove, if they didn't stop interfering with his business.

It is noticed that McCracken county, with a population much larger than any other two counties in the district combined has less marriage licenses issued every year than any of her neighbors. This might seem strange, on casual consideration, but local matrimonial authorities say that it is not because less people in McCracken county get married, but because more of them go elsewhere to have the knot tied, principally to Metropolis, Ill. Metropolis, in fact, is the matrimonial Mecca of all southwestern Kentucky, and hundreds of Kentucky couples are yearly married there.

A number of Paducah gentlemen are rejoicing today. They are happy because the probability is they will not have to go to Ballard county. The gentlemen in question have daily been expecting a summons from

RESOLUTIONS,

Whereas God in his alwise providence, has seen fit to remove from our ranks a friend and brother, J. T. Thompson, therefore be it

Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to Him that doeth all things well,

Resolved, That in his demise we lose one whose place is rarely filled, and

Resolved, That the church extend to the widow and little son and relatives, her sympathy in this their very sad bereavement, and

Resolved, That the family be enabled to say in the language of one of old when in deep sorrow and sore afflictions, the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord.

Resolved, That the bereaved widow paper and turns out to be untrue, hundreds of men who daily retail stories on less evidence, and who would knock any man down who called them falsifiers, will wrap themselves up in a mantle of imaginary virtue, and say: "What outrageous liars these newspapers are!"

These things are perfectly familiar to almost everybody. If you assail one of the offenders he will tell you that he repeated what he had heard, but he would not have published it in a newspaper. Another will tell you that he has a "good item for your paper," but ends by saying: "Don't use my name." Well, why not use your name, since you tell the story, and think it a good item? To this it will be answered that the informant does not want to be mixed up in it, or does not know it of his own knowledge, or some other excuse which indicates that he wishes the newspaper to assume a responsibility that he is unwilling to assume himself.

Now, as we have said, these facts are familiar enough, but the lesson of them is not understood by many people. They mean simply that a higher standard of truth is expected of the newspaper men than from the rest of the community. This expectation is based on experience and observation. The newspaper man who honors his profession is trained to telling the truth, often from his boyhood days. Not only is he trained to telling the truth, but to finding it out. There is scarcely a young reporter who is not "worked" by unscrupulous persons and inveigled into publishing stories that are entirely unfounded. This is considered "fun" by a certain class of person, but it is no fun to the reporter, whom it is certain to get into trouble. It is however, often beneficial to him in the long run, for it increases his caution, and trains him to weighing evidence and to verifying reports.

He is, however, subject to the disadvantage that he must do his work in great haste, and is not always able to run down a falsehood which comes to him from a source apparently credible. But of the talk of the people a very small percentage is based on personal knowledge. Far the greater part of it is the mere retelling of what one or another has heard. We speak now of persons who would not knowingly tell an untruth, and who believe what they say. But not one in ten of them has taken any pains to verify what he has heard. Some, indeed, are conscientious enough to say that they do not vouch for the stories they tell, but give them as they heard them. The majority, however, accept what they hear without question and repeat it without misgiving, though there may not be a word of truth in it.

Outside of this class there are, of course, many mischief makers who invent stories and put them in circulation for purposes of their own, or from mere love of lying. It is unnecessary to deal with these, they have no desire to do so, and, of course, so when it suits them than a falsehood.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. OFFICER HARLAN'S LETTER.

Skull and Cross Bones Sent Him as a Joke.

Officer Frank Harlan received a letter this morning that for a few seconds made the hair on the sides of his head stand erect. The hair on top of his head was not affected by the letter, as there is none there.

The letter in question was from President Leake, of the school board, and contained a label with blazing red skull and cross bones, and the words "poison." The words accompanying the harrowing label were:

Friend Frank: Since presenting you with the little vial this morning, I find that the law requires me to label the same. In order that I may not violate so stringent a law, please paste the enclosed label on the vial, and oblige yours, (Signed) C. M. LEAKE.

The joke was, President Leake had given the officer a bottle of fine whiskey, and had neglected to put the label on it.

worth anything, has fallen far short most recent developments, and touched on the future possibilities of it. The paper was accorded the most undivided attention, and Dr. Bernheim then gave practical demonstrations of the wonderful science. A well known young man of the city was used as a subject. He was placed under the hypnotic influence and given a sword. This, he was told, was a pipe, and the complacent manner in which he puffed at it was exceeded only by the alacrity with which he threw the weapon down and jumped upon it when told it was a rattle snake.

A lead pencil he lit and enjoyed when told it was a cigar, but the most remarkable experiment was when he was informed he was a certain well known doctor, and that a patient desired to consult him.

Another physician walked up to him and said he was troubled with insomnia, and wanted some medicine. The subject sat down at a table and wrote a prescription which every doctor present acknowledged was a good one for the ailment. It was written in English and one of the ingredients was morphine in medical doses.

Several of the physicians had previously been skeptical in regard to the science, but every one the reporter saw expressed himself as being perfectly convinced.

After the paper had been discussed Dr. Bernheim invited those present out to partake of a genuine "Dutch Supper." There was baked goose, brown bread, and many delicacies quite new to the jolly crowd. All united in voting Dr. Bernheim's entertainment of the Medical Society one of the best and most entertaining ever known.
